WORKING FOR THE PUBLIC.

How the Average Street Laborer Manages to Kill Time in the City.

[Brooklyn Eagio ] The effete aristocrats of the east, about whom we have read so much and who take such ordinary pains to kill time, should take lessons from any of the workers hithe public department of New York. The average street laborer kills time lesa effort aud more auceess the most accomplished of the effete monarchs of the east. One day I sat sear a front window and observed the ac-tions of a gang of four men who came to open up a portion of the atreat. It was a day that was alternately sultry and rainy—just the aort of a day to stay in doors—and I had an extended opportunity of observing the actions of the gang. It was about 8 o'clock when I first west to the window. Thay were all four sitting in a row on the curb stone like so many blackbirds on the bough of a tree. They were overalls, flannel shirts and various hend-gear, and, as they chewed tobacco, the four jaws rose and fell in unison. A picturesque assortment of picks and shovele was piled in front of them.

When I glanced out an hour later they were still staring thoughtfully at the pavement and moving their jaws machanically. Then the boss, after much effort, succeeded in getting a jointed foot measure, about the size of a psuknife, out of his overall pocket and began to measure off a section of the street about ten feet long and six wide. The others looked at him with the casual interest of men who were about to go to work. I'reseutly the foreman flew into a great passion, seewled and began to blow up the man. lie awore like a canal boat captain, blackguarded the men roundly and then abruptly went over and sat down besides them, and then the others paid not the slightest attention to him. At this point it began to sprinkle, and the quartette journeyed heavily to a neighboring area, where they sat down comfortably on the stones and lighted their pipes It rained about fifteen murutes.

Two hours later the mon were again at They had by this time, amid a perfect whirlwhil of words, succeeded in mapping out their work, and they were yanking up the stones by means of crowbars and pickaras. The boss sat on a neighborboring fireplug and yelled at than oncouragingly. After a mighty effort they augcooled in loosening the stones, and then they all journeyed to the area sgain and spent an hour eating their dinners. After this they came out slowly, one after another, looked at the stones, looked up and down the street, stretchel, yawnel and began to pile up the stones in the middle of the atreet. This was designed to protect horses from stumbling Into the hole. It also served to almost entirely blockade the street.

There was now a rectangular piece of about six by ten feet from which the atone; had been removed, and which gained thereby a depth of about six inches Having cleared all the stones out of the space, the gang sat down again on the gutter to admire it, and suddenly it began once more to rain. They ail retreated into the area and presently the base sent two of them forth armed with bailers. One had an old tomate can and the other a saucepan. It was raining hard and the hore was full of water. One of the laborers took It was raining hard and the hole was up a position at either enl of the six-luck excavation and began to bail it out. The rain beat down upon their broad backs, but they bailed on faithfully for nearly two hours, not the faintest effect resulting from their efforts; they might as well have triad to ball out the Atlantic ocean with a couple of thimbles. When the rain stopped they stopped, too, and went back to the area, leaving the space completely fliled with water. later on they succeeded in loosening the aarth a little and then they shouldered their picks and shovels and wont

Chicago Ruplicates of Noted Men.

[Chleago Neus] Di you ever notice what striking resemblances to noted men you can discov r on the street! For instance a counterfeit presentiment of "Boo" Twood can be foun I in the baggageman at the Sherman. Tho same figure, the same eyes, the same boad, narrow at the top and broad in the chin. and the same beard which Nast made so familiar to us all. Whon Tweel took Frencir leave and skipped to Spaln "John" was at the Tremont, and was bothered night and day by the people who stared at him, thinking him the "boss" in disguise. Another Sherman house employe bears a striking like ness to a noted man. This is in old writer named "Barnay," who is r good copy of Sammy Tilden. George C. Miln, the actor, prides himself on a fancied resemblance to the first Napoleon, and there are a number of people who think they look like the hero of the third empire. There are pienty of aren who look like Vand rbilt, and there is a New York · drummer who so greatly resembles ex-President Arthur that he causes a sensation every time he registers at the Gran I Pacific. Grant's beard is often immitated and a resemblance created. The number of people who think they look like great personages is legion. There was a man here who fancled he was a copy of the Chandes picture of Sinke-pears, and there are lots of Augio manines who try to look like the prince of

monanza Mackey's Weaith. |Cur. Chicago Harabl.|

Mr. Mackey rever was richer than $20,-000,000 even on paper. He has been known as the pourest lavaster of any f the bonanza tirus. He never yet made al invertment, except in government or atate bonds, witch yielded a dollar of meome. All his aper active investments have come to naught. He gives away vest sums, squanders other vast sums, and we all know what Mrs. Mackey accomplishes in the way of expenditure.

One day, in front of the Nevada bank, in San Francisco, Mr. Mackey read in a paper handed to him an absurd statement that Mrs. Mackey had offered to buy the Are de Triomphe, in Paris, for 2,000,000 franca. "You may say," said John W. in his broad north of Ireland accent, "that Mrs. Mackey le no fool, and neither is John Mackey. That is a dom lie, sir. An' you may say, mon, that if John Mackey was fool enough to pay for that arch or any other arch, begal, sir, he don't know where in h- the money is comin' from. They've bled me, sor, like a pack of wolves. They say Mrs. Mackey has spont $500,000 a year in Europe. it's a dom lie, sor. She lives like a lady, and I want her to do so, but, begad, $50,000 pays all her expenses, balls and all, for a whole year. They said the other day she spent $50,000 on a single bail to Grevy or somebody-Gad knows who he is-but that la a lie, sor. She don't apend $50,000 in a whole year in Paris. Say that, will you, sor ["

Mr. Mackey was sincere in this. Mrs. Mackey is not near the spendthrift that a lot of romance writers try to make her out. Yet John's own admission that her expenditures were $50,000 a year, or thereabouts, is enough to make werkers growl and people of small means weep thousand a year to idle away! Just for a woman and a woman's prile! A woman, daughter of a barber—a barber in Downio-ville, Cal., in 1856, now "Col." J. H. Hungerford, of the liquievard dor bialesberbes-the knightly father-m-law of the great "American Midne," as the French love to call Mnckey. Aftar all, it is a stupendous joke. And the l'rince Teifeuner of Italy, who married the youngest of the barber's daughters, and the Prince Colonna, beir of the greatest house of Italy, who married Mackey's step-daughter-hor father was a poor little druggist in a mining camp in Nevada City. Could any rough or vigorous romance ever find such expression!

The hair-dresser curled the hair by means of a hot iron, and used frequently to burn McCullough's scalp, curse and strik at his servant. I used to see McCullough sit with a knife in his hand all the time his hair was being curled, repeating the assertion that if his scaip was burned, he would cut the attendant's throat. Well, three or four years ago his scalp had been burned in an minny places that it was covered with little Irritating sores. He has the reputation of being a temperance man, and, as his repuiation came to him without his asking, he is some what proud of It and dosen't want to lose it. On this occasion the general arrange I with one of his lutimates that when he had been speaking for half an hour the friend should bring him a drink of whisky in a coffee cup.

The plan workel well up to a certain point. Toe general, at a signal from his friend, paused in his elequent address to take his coffee. The burial services of the deceased brother were novel in many respects, and quite a number of the members of their Society spoke of the good traits of character of the departed, alternately. EMMETT GARVIN LOGAN, whose handme features are endeavored to be portrayed above, is one of the very brightest as well as the most popular journalists in the State. Born in Shelby county somewhere in latter part of the '40a, he entered the Washington & Lee University at an early age and in a few years graduated with distinction. Of his school life Mr. T. P. Grastr wrote as follows a few years ago in the Modern Argo, of Kansas City:

"His chief distinction at College was won by his wonderful fluency as a speaker At the middle of his tirst session he was chosen as one of the society orators, and electrified his large and critical audience by an oration on Lord Byron. From that time onward Logan was famous. He was the pride of Kentuckians, of whom there were a great many at the University, the idol of the ladies, and perhaps the most were there from all over the South. With his striking face and distinguished figures he stands six feet, two, sins shoes-aided hy a manner most peculiarly fascinating, these things were not to he wondered at. The atrong-minled, but rather cynical, eldest daughter of the late General R. E. Lee, was his most enthusiastic admirer, and immediately after the great "Byron Speech," claimed him as her protege-and he is no doubt indebted to the ir fluence of he thus became the central star, for much of that genuine refinement of mind and feeling that has everlmarked the man and jour-

Returning to his home in Shelhyville, he shortly afterwards made his first venture Ever into journalism, by starting a weekly paper, which he named the Countril The ability with which it was edited was the aubject of general newspaper remark and more than one prophesied the distinguished future of the embryo journalist. But with all his accomplishments Mr. Logan is far trom being a financier and is as ignor ant of the ways of money getting as a child. A few weeks since I saw in a copy of The Courant was therefore a failure finanyour paper paragraph stating that a baby cially and after alyear or two the enterprise was abundoned. He readily obtained had observed his aprightliness and he became editor of the Kentneky and Southern News Column and at once made it a de cided feature of the paper. He remained on the paper for several years and until Gov. Underwood started the Intelligencer at Bowling Green. Then he and that other journalistic lumioary, Col. E. Polk Johneon, cast their fortunes with it.

But the C J. soon found that Logan was necessary adjunct to its elitorial make up and he was offered the position of managing editor to return, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and satisfaction to the proprietors and readers of that great paper. His f rie sceme to be to write terse, pointed and paugent editorial paragraphe and he gave it full away in writing them under the inspiration of late dispatches. He also contributed many leading editorials, which were frequently attributed to Mr. Watterson.

In October 1882, when Gov. Underwood made his second newspaper venture in the form of the Cincinnati News, he prevailed on Mr. Logan to accept the managing editorship, making the pecuniary inducement, a question not to be ignored even by a circles man in money matters. Under his control the paper soon took a leading piace in Ohio politics and was the principal factor in the election of Gov. [Hosilly in that usually republican State. He spent a couple of years in the Paris of America and then returned to Louisville, where in May, 1881, with his old friend, Polk Johnson, he launched that excelient craft, which has since proved so popular and so successful, the Louisville Evening Times, and upon which he is now putting his best licks.

So much for his public career. His pri vate life's story will be fully as interesting to his friends all over the State and to his many relatives in this county. It seems that while he was aiding in making the Bowling Green paper so bright and news , he still had some spare moments to ilevote to the gentler sex. I! was then he met the lovely Miss Lena Covington, daughter of Dr. Albert Covington. They at once recognized their affinity and after the usual period of love-making, were made one after God's holy ordinance November 13:h, 1881. A bright, pretty hoy, a real chip of the old block, now blesses the union and in their handsome brown stone front in Louleville, he spends in quiet happiness, the hours not devoted to his most exacting profession.

Already ranking with Mr. Watterson and the other great editorial writers of the day, Mr. Logan's star is in the ascendant and he is destined to win even greater fame than he. When this is accomplished, as it is sure to be, no friend of the gentieman so imperfectly aketched will be prouder than the writer of these lines.

ARMY MUSIC.

HOW AN ARMY COOK WAS CHARMED BY A REGIMENTAL BAND.

A Monater Itand at a Grand Review-Kilpatrick in Charge of a Regular Virginia Breakdown-The First Shell.

St. Louis Republican.] Mr. Lloyd Harris, of St. Louis, contributes the following from a rather extensive budgot of war papers already published: Many of the veterans of the Army of the Potomac remember the splendid band of the Fourthcenth Brooklyn zouavas. Wherever they appeared in their gay uniform and started one of their inspiring tunes the effect on all the colored servants was electrical. One day while we were encamped back of the Arlington our house sable cook had started with our coffee pot in his hand from an open fire toward the tent were Hooe and the Plummers and I were waiting his arrival. Just at the moment the Fourteenth band struck up "Dixie" as they were passing by, and away started the cook, still holding the coffee-pot, completely entranced by the music, and never stopped until the tune had ended and he was half a mile from the tent. On his return he looked very foolish and ventured: "Captain, we never heard such music as dat in ole Vircountry. On our way to Fredericksburg, in 1862, we had encamped for a day, and late in the afternoon our attention was attracted by the music of a band in a grove only half a mile away, who kept playing one lively air for so long a time that some few of us proposed to go over and see what the fun was about At this time Kilpatrick was lieutenant colenel of the Harris light cavalry, afterward called by prejudiced infantry "Kilpatrick's thieves." When we reached the grove a very funny sight greeted us. The band was still playing, but nearly exhausted. Kilpatrick, elevated by standing on a barrel-head, was shouting directions to at least fifty darky men, women and children, old and young, who were dancing a breakdown in the true Virginia etyle, the sweat pouring off from them. The band leader appealed to Kilpatrick in behalf of his wind-broken band, but in vain. "Kil" shouted back, "Play till you wear the darkles out," then yelled to the darkles, "Keep it up, boys and girls, you will beat the band sure."

Aye, there stood the man who was afterward celebrated in history, Gen. Klipatrick, the raider, prompting the most amusing dance ever witnessed. No modern minstrel troupe has ever equaled it. His officers were just as busy as he was, and one of them passed around the hat, to which the spectators responded liberally then, just as the band blew a last and dismal blast. Kilpatrick threw the contents of the hat among the contrabands. Such a scene; down on all fours, scrambling, pushing, and screaming, until the last silver piece had been secured. Kilpatrick came down from the harrel, and in his ever geniai manner shook hands with us, saying: "Gentlemen of the Sixth, I am glad to see you. You will excuse this little party, for it is mot often that we have such fun, and at the same time give active employment to the contrabands."

The Iron brigade in crossing the Rappamannock river to participate in the hattle of Fredericksburg were hidden by a dense fog from the enemy and one of the regiments, the Twenty-fourth Michigan, who were to receive their first baptism under fire, were unarching in front of the old Sixth veterans, ecolors flying, the band playing "Hail Co-llumbla, Happy Land," when, alasi the sun appeared, the for lifted and the tralugues of half a dozen rebel batteries opened their work of destruction. Almost the first shell anded in the midst of the band and scattered them right and left. Those who surwived beat a hasty retreat to the sheltering bank of the river, and brave Col Morrow Mept his gallant regiment "well in hand" shouting, "Steady, men, those Wisconsin men are watching you." I do not remember of ever seeing that band in any of the hard-fought battles their regiment afterward participated in.

Only a Coward Nor' Nor'- West.

Brig. Gen. Comiy, in National Tribune. We had in the Twenty-third Ohio (Haves' regiment) a quaint old character-an enlisted musician-whose name I would not mention for anything. Just before the battle of South Mountain he came to me and askel me to step askle with him a moment. I dil so, and be sail: "My viol. Major, I am a coward! I did not know it. I thrught I could help the country, and, though I was past 45, and wasedn't to, I enlisted. Now I have found shat I can't go into a light! I can't, major, of you should kill ma! I shall be disgraced, and all the folks at home will know it. I can never hold my head up again if I try to go luto thin fight. Can't you do something for mel Give me something to do that ain't ighting and I'll do anything. Oh, for God's sake, major, think of something and save ana from the disgrace!" The poor fellow was half frantic in his arnestness. I thought a moment and said; A-..... do you think you could carry water for the men while they are fighting! It is going to be an awful hot day, and a canteen I fresh water will be about the greatest luxury the men could have no ler fire. Can you carry water for them?" "On, yell Thank you, major." Well, now, in the shickest of that fight, where the regiextent lest within eight men of half that went into action, old A --- would come to the front loadel down with cancaeas delivering them, and taking up the empty ones along the line. Between bayomet charges the min were hugging the gound like a long-lost brother, under such a storm of minie balls as did not seem to leave any moccupied space in the air. Old Awould prance down the line delivering canricens to the panting men without any more souse of fear than the bravest man in the sarmy, until his last canteen of water was smone, then he would give a will yell and abolt for the rear as if the devil was after

ARTEMUS WARD, THE HUMORIST.

Illa Ideas of Fun-Last Days of His Ex Istence-His Magnetic Control.

[Dr. Robert Morris in Courier-Journal,] In appearance "the genial humerist," as he was distinctively styled, was tall, slender, light-complexioned, with prominers features, fair hair, and eyes that twinkled with mirth. Brimfull of good fellowship, he was generous to a fault. He expressed to me his firm belief in the truths of the Christian religion, and in none of his writings or jectures were there any derogatory remarks upon religion or its professors or teachers. Prothat jesting up in holy things was so easy an accomplishment that no real humorist would indulge in it.

Like all victims to the Inslituous diseaseconsumption-Ward grew more and more cheerful and hopeful of recovery as he approached the end, and his last utterance was pleasant allusion to the prince of Wales, who just then 11867) was receiving many presents. He said to his companion; "I believe I will make over my panorama to his royal highness." He remembered me in his closing hours as one who had cheered and aided him in his early struggles. Had I known of his condition in time I would have made a winter journny over the sea to extend to him a partiug hand.

An English writer de-cribes hlm as he appered in those last months, in the horrible winter climate of London. Sometimes he was profoundly dejected, at others shy or reproachful. He seemed nervously auxieus to please, yet with a certain tremble in his eye that convinced you of his perfect sang froid, and one thing always—fuil, unescapably full, of fun. His humor was delicate, evervescent and personal. He had a loving disposition, but was of a proud and independent spirit. The bursts of quaint humor connected with his history could only live in the subtle atmosphere which his presence created. Within five minutes after comated. mencing a jecture his audience responded to his slightest breath. The original who appeared before them demure, impassive, quite simple, unaffected, slightly gauche, twiddling his little dudish cane, played in reality upon his audience as upon an oid People not accustomed to him laughed out of time, laughed before the joke came in, laughed at his looks, which were pregnant with laughs. Never was there a stronger case of magnetic control.

His tail, gaunt, though slender figure; his curly, fight hair, and large, aquiline nose, which always reminded me of a parrot's; his thin face, flushed with consumption; his little cough, which seemed to shake him to pleces, and which he said was wearing hlm out, at which remark we ail laughed irresistibly and then felt ashamed of ourselves for laughing. But he seemed to enjoy his cough, and showed it to us on all wides, and petted it, and was evidently proud of it. It was all a part of his queer, topay-turvy mind, in which everything seemed most natural when upside down.

The Hotel Bill of Fure.

[l'hitadelphia Times.] Amid all the flerce competition of summer esorts, it is strange that no hotel-keeper has yot arisen with geulus or courage sufficient to make a new departure in the bill of fare. The effort of all these estimable men is the same—to make the longest possible list of dinner dishes. And the effert of all their guests is constantly the same-to find something in the list that they care to eat. After many experiments, more or less disastrousor, in the case of old stagers, without taking any new risks-they commonly settle down upon a few of the plainest items that the menu offers. The rest remain untasted.

So universal is this experience of the futiiity of the bill of fare that one can not but marvel to find it year after year unchanged. Who wants the dozen kinds of roast and boiled meats, the score of entrees, ail tasting allke; the pretentlous array of canned vegetables and the innumerable other imitations or repetitions of the same old bill of fare presented at every hotel throughout the winter! Nobody cares to sample all these things, and most of them would never be sampled more than once by the same person. And yet they must occupy a great deal of attention from the cooks, which might be concentrated with much better effect upon the few things that the guests

It is apparently an inseparable part of the American hotel system that everything which comes out of one kitchen must have the same flavor, and thus even the variety that is promised by the long hill of fare proves only a mora aggravated monopoly. If the cooks could be persuaded to drop two-thirds of their alleged Franch dishes and devote themselves to the rational preparation of a good square meal, well choren, well cooked and well served, the health, comfort and good humor of the guests would be wonderfully promoted and the fortunes of the hotel could not fail to be advanced. There is a wide field for hotel reform here, in which money may be both made and saved.

The Confederate Cruisers.

[Clitengo Journal.] The hearing and adjultration of the various claims which have been pending for some time before what Is known as the Alabama claims commission, in Washington, discloses some very lateresting facts words. Under all circumstances, however, about the depreciations of the Confederate such articles are sure to be returned to their ernisers upon American commerce during the civil war. The damage done to unarmed vessels, however burtful it may have been to the Union slile in the late contest, was of little practical benefit or importance to the Confederate cause.

The claims presented to the Goneva tribnnal for damages done by Confederate cruis- up in the snow alongoide the despoiled cairn ers aggregated $25,408,170.31, of which the Alabama destroyed $7,059,293.76; the Boston, $400; the Chienmangn, $183,070.73; the Florida, $4.0%,081.00; the Clarence, tender handy and know will be useful to the other of the Florida, $66 736.10; the Tacony, tender of the Flori la $169,195.51; the Georgia, $131,160.72; the Jefferson Davis, $7,752; the Nashville, $108 433,05; the Retribution, $29,-018 53; the Sally, $5,540; the Shenandoah. $6 658,838.31; the Sumter, $179,697.67; the Tallahassee, $530,841.73. Two Months' Intercourse.

[Philadelphia Bulletin.] The manners of people at summer hotels furnish a boundless field for study. A year or two ago two Philadelphia ladies arrived at Lake Mohonk and were placed at a table of whom would have given a year's labor already occupied by un Albany party of for it, but the owner brought it home at last six, bearing aristecratic names that con- when he returned to his waisze. I have trasted strikingly with their behaviors. For two months these patrician Arbanians sat at the little table without addressing a word of evility to the Philadelphia ladies. At the close of that period the Albany mager familias suddenly remarked: "We leave you to-day." Wherenpon the braver Philadelphia lady said: "Indeed!" And so the two months, constant intervents leave and months' constant intercourse Legan and and style will be kept on hand. Ascensions

HONEST ESQUIMAUX.

THIEVING AMONG THEM ALMOST WHOLLY UNKNOWN.

Absence of "Hoggishness"-Low Wages but no Stealing-A Communistic Method of Rorrowing Articles In Case of Necessity.

[Lient. Schwatka in New York Times.] After all, the Esquimaux do not seem to have a very good idea of comparative value fanity he abhorred, declaring that it was not funay, and if funny, it was indecent and vulgar. He agreed with Samuel Johason an article governing them far more than any other consideration. If a needle or a nall or other cheap an I simple article is needed at once a fex-skin or a blade of whalebone will be willingly exchanged for it, If they have it, the value of the skin or blade being enough in civilization to supply the tribe with these articles for an indefinite period. For a summer's work on a whaler -about two months-they generally receive a cheap breech-leading gun, bought in the United States for from $4 to $5, and $2 or $3 worth of ammunition. Things on which they have worked patiently for months they will trade away for some civilized trinket that could not have occupied more than a few minutes in its manufacture. Nor are they much more considerate in their exchanges of commodities with each other, and the most incongruous payments are often made by them. I never saw any display of that characteristic among Indiane, and generally known by the mathetic title of "hoggishness," wherein a liberal gift to one for an article must be added to in purchasing the same from another. To prevent this supposltitious trait I determined at once to fix a standard of value in obtaining dogs from them, large numbers of which I needed for my anticipated aledge journey, but, as I had placed the remuneration at good rates, I never had occasion to wrangle over il with them. In fact, such contentions are wholly unknown among these E-quimanx in dealing with strangers or with each other. Even when several whalers are wintering in their vicinity, and one is unusually atingy in payments and others conspicuously generous, the former is not "boycotted" altogether in the amount of meat, furs, clothing, and other material they have for them all

Thieving among these bands is almost wholly unknown, and this has long issen their character. A British explering expedition that wintered among them over a balf century ago, speaks of this virtue among them. A small party of Esqui-maux had built their igloos, or snow-house, near the ships of this expedition—that is two or three miles distant-and a number of the white people visited them. Upon returning to the ships one person noticed that he hal jost a giove, and supposed that it might have been purloined by the natives, until oue of them, who had followed the party, returned the glove, having walked the entire distance for that purpose. Two dogs were purchased of tham by one ship's crew. They disappeared one night, and suspicion was naturally aroused, but the next morning the two dogs were found securely tied, E quiman methol, on the deck of the other ship. After the dogs had broken loose from one ship and had returned to their village, their original owner had brought them back in the night, and by mistake had returned them to the wrong vessel. Surely they carry out the Biblical injunction to avoid even the appearance of evil in a manner that would not stand with the conduct of some civilized persons. When I lived among them our party was never careful to collect tools or other things left around the house, and I do not now recall that we ever missed an article. The party left a large amount of trading material, amounting in value to probably $1,000 or $2 000, in a snow-house in the village, and visited the whale ships over 100 miles away, and nothing was touched dur-ing its absence. I have already noted for what triffing wages the Esquimanx work hard all summer, and yet here was onough to be had hy stealing to supply them for a number of years. The protection in a snow house is about equal to that he a tent with the flaps tied, or a house with an unlocked door. During most of our absence no Exquimaux ilved in the village, but they were away wairusing in snow houses some two or three miles distant, and thus no one was left to guard the house, rendering thieving very easy. Ilad any one stolen anything, and been detected, there is no penalty provided for the offense or for any other crime committed.

The only time when the lategrity of any one of the village nativas was questioned was when a member of my party jost a valuable panknife. It disappeared inysteriously at the same time with an Innuit who bore the worst reputation in this particular line in the tribe, although none of them could furnish a bill of particulars as to any single dofinite act of his in the past. We were living in the snow-houses at the time, but when summer came and the igloos had melted the supposed stolen property was found on the ground on the site of our old snow-hone, and this supposed charge against the Esquiman was thrown out of court. They have a method nineng themselves of borrowing articles in the most communistic way without any waste of words. Under all circumsunges, however, original owners.

If they are out of oil for their lamps or provisions and that a caim (pile of large stones) containing oil or meat of any kind they do not hesitate to break into nni take enough to relieve their immeliate necessities -nover more-and attach to a stick stack payment in full for what has been taken therefrom in the way of a snew-knife, a bag of bullets, or whatever they may have party whose meat or olf has been taken. If this owner belongs to the same village as the traveler the former will be compensated when they meet. This now knife or bag of bullets, or what not, that has been suspended as collateral from the apright stick may may pass it daily and it will never be mo-lested until the owner comes along looking for his oil or meat. I know an Innuit hunter who visited the whale ships at Marhle Island on leaving the mainland to cross the ice to the island, and where all chances of seeing game ended, take his breechioading ritis, on inestimable prize in their nyes, and, planting its butt in the deep snow leave it stanting upright on the native line of travel to the ship: I saw It about two weeks after it had been put there on my way to the ships, and again about four weeks after that when returning. I suppose 100 or 200 hall passed it, nine-tenths noticed this trequently among the Esquimanx.

When, through debility, the action of the kidneys is perverted, these organs rob the blood of lis needed constituent, albumen, which is passed off in the urine, while worn out matter, which they should carry off from the blood, is allowed to remain. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the kidneys are restored to proper action, and Albu-
